PILLSBURY UNITED COMMUNITIES

United for what's next.

In a year of transitions, Pillsbury United Communities remained steadfast in its mission of co-creating enduring change toward a just society. Through our innovative programs and diverse neighborhood assets, we imagined a more equitable future and built it side-by-side with our community, as we have for more than a century.

In April, we welcomed Cinnamon Pelly as the new President and CEO, taking the reins from Adair Mosely who led the agency for five years. She brings to PUC a wealth of experience in community development, education, health and human services, philanthropy, and the arts.

Ms. Pelly began her tenure at PUC with a focus on the UNITED piece of our legacy. That means welcoming the public back to our centers after years of disruptions. It means responding to critical needs as a team, from expanding food access to addressing urgent educational gaps. UNITED also means bringing the community together, as we did with some of the biggest celebrations in our history. And it means growing our capacity through new operational and data management systems that align everyone around the best information.

Ultimately, UNITED means investing in the people who make PUC work. In September, we brought nearly 100 of our amazing community builders together at our annual staff retreat. Powered by their skills, relationships, and passion, we're growing a more connected and vibrant community in 2024 and far beyond.

“It’s an honor to lead an agency that’s impacted the lives of so many, for so many generations. Now we’re building on our longtime strengths to make a bigger impact everywhere we work.”

WHO WE ARE

About Pillsbury United Communities

Pillsbury United Communities (PUC) is one of Minnesota's most well-established and impactful organizations with more than 145 years of service. Our trusted network of neighborhood centers and innovative social enterprises serves the Camden, Cedar-Riverside, East Phillips, Near North, and Powderhorn neighborhoods of Minneapolis and an array of diverse communities across the State of Minnesota.

WHO WE SERVE

PUC serves the Black, Brown, Indigenous, immigrant, and working-class residents of Minneapolis striving to build better lives for their communities and families in spite of racism, poverty and other systemic barriers.

OUR MISSION

We are community builders co-creating enduring change toward a just society.

OUR VISION

We imagine thriving communities where every person has personal, social, and economic power.

Feeding community vitality.

This year our programs helped nourish and sustain our community in a big way, from food access to targeted health support. As rising costs strained families in 2023, we stepped up to put healthy, culturally relevant food within reach. That included more fresh community meals and expanding our popular free produce days at Oak Park Center in partnership with Second Harvest Heartland.

As health challenges in the community evolved, so did our response. New grants helped us engage with East African, Latine, and Black communities around substance use disorder, mental health, and opioid overdose prevention. Through our innovative community health worker program, we brought hands-on support to hundreds of families, assisting with everything from healthcare navigation to transportation to managing chronic diseases.

Our Immigrant Women’s Advocacy Program (IWAP) continued to provide safe space for East African women to share stories, find support, and make joyful connections—like the popular “Sheeko & Shah” (storytime and tea) sessions at Brian Coyle. And to promote active, healthy youth, we deepened our investment in youth athletics alongside partners like Cedar- Riverside Athletics and Enrichment. This year more than 300 young athletes participated each week. Go Coyle Royals!

Impact Data Highlights

“Access to good food is the foundation of everything else. Our programs make sure people have agency to choose the food they need.”

Juan Pomoquiza Pomaquiza,
Food Shelf Coordinator

A stage for joyful connections.

2023 was a year of celebration. Thousands gathered for PUC community events, from the return of Juneteenth commemorations at Oak Park Center to free public health fairs at Brian Coyle, Waite House, and North Market. At our “We Are Cedar Riverside” cultural immersion workshops, over 800 attendees learned from Native American, Oromo, and Somali neighbors, culminating in a multicultural meal that brought everyone to the table.

Pillsbury House + Theatre hosted its 2nd Inside Out Block party, where over 500 residents, artists, and local creative leaders convened to create and build community. In addition to producing award-winning mainstage plays by amazing local storytellers, this year PH+T launched plans for an arts and economic development hub in South Minneapolis. In Phase One, they acquired two adjacent parcels to expand the existing campus and opened a scenic workshop to train aspiring theater workers.

Our celebrations of community flowed into the airwaves as well as the streets. With 57 hours of original programming per week from 49 hosts, KRSM radio brought hyper-local stories and sounds to listeners across the Southside. In a boon for a grassroots media, KRSM and our North News community newspaper joined other local media outlets to signal boost, cross-promote, and amplify the voices of our community. Stay tuned.

Impact Data Highlights

“We are a unique microcosm of the world in the heart of our city. Our events are creating opportunities to celebrate the beauty of our differences instead of letting them divide us.”

Amano Dube, Director of Brian Coyle Center

Paths of opportunity.

We stepped up our flagship youth, education, and workforce readiness programs to help more local people thrive with the opportunities ahead. Our Youth + Future Focus work guided 350 high school students to find success in post-secondary education and their first job, with one third gaining career experience as interns with PUC programs including Sisterhood Boutique, KRSM Radio, North News, Food Systems and Pillsbury House+Theatre. Through our Career Pathways program, youth aged 18-24 received intensive financial and social support to train for good-paying jobs in their areas of interest.

For thousands of K-12 learners, PUC's Office of Public Charter Schools continued to provide life-saving educational experiences that serve diverse cultural and learning needs. This year the program's innovative approach to education and evaluation was featured at a national conference as a model for others nationwide.

Meanwhile, our social enterprises keep uplifting the local community. As Northside grocers including Aldi and Walmart closed in 2023, North Market remained an anchor for good food and good jobs on the Northside. The store saw the highest sales in its five-year history, with a third of revenue from fresh produce! It was also a boom year for Full Cycle, our Southside bike shop that provides job skills, a paycheck, and intensive support to unhoused youth.

Impact Data Highlights

in total tuition and wage payments for 16 youth through Career Pathways

347
youth were supported through Youth + Future Focus, including 117 paid interns

1,055
youth served by Full Cycle staff and peer outreach apprentices, including 7 as employees

9,200+
students served by 18 innovative schools authorized by the Office of Public Charter Schools

"I never thought I would go to college, especially having a kid. I now see myself having a career and getting an education."

Cassandra, Career Pathways Participant

Seeding systemic change.

2023 was a watershed year for PUC on the public policy front. We served as lead advocates or key supporters for eight successful bills this legislative session, helping to advance issues vital to our communities. Bills we supported include free K-12 school lunches, Drivers Licenses for All, Restore the Vote, and increased state funding for community health workers. We also helped secure direct appropriations for our Career Pathways and Office of Public Charter Schools' work.

We've long known the perils of the "Benefits Cliff," where community members lose access to vital public assistance with small changes in income. This year we took steps to change the policy by hosting focus groups and giving 59 community members stipends to share their experiences. Those efforts are helping to inform long-term solutions with Hennepin County, with support from the Kresage Foundation.

This fall, we partnered with FairVote Minnesota to get out the vote in the run-up to the 2023 elections, reaching thousands of voters through door-knocking and phone banking. We also trained and coordinated new reporters for the Minneapolis chapter of Documenters. These paid reporters attend city, county, and school district meetings to help bring important issues to the public's attention. That's an investment in a more informed and empowered community.

Impact Data Highlights

new community reporters trained to cover public meetings, like school board meetings, through the Documenters Network

people directly reached through our get out the vote campaigns

local residents shared their experience with the "benefits cliff" to impact county policy through a series of community meetings

"Our responsibility is to share what people might not know, get people involved, and equip them to advocate for the things they need."

Jovita Francisco Morales, Policy + Advocacy Community Organizer

Each year, the Phyllis Colwell Award is given to two outstanding Pillsbury United staff members for exemplary performance and commitment to our mission. The $1,500 award was established in 1977 in honor of a long-time PUC Board of Directors member and Board Chair. This year's awardees are Michelle Negrete, Youth and Future Focus Operations and Evaluation Manager, and Mohamud Igge, Community Development Operations Coordinator.

Michelle Negrete

Michelle is an incredibly kind, brilliant, and dedicated leader of youth work across the agency.

Described as a quiet hero, her infectious laughter, attention to detail, and dedication to this challenging work have inspired her colleagues over the years.

Mohamud Igge

Mohamud is a gifted, culturally savvy, and trusted multilingual staff member who sets a tone of professionalism and respect at Coyle Center, where he manages the front desk. He loves his job and excels in his position in spite of the job's many difficult demands.

Congratulations to this year's awardees!
