About PUC

Pillsbury United Communities (PUC) is a nationally recognized, community-anchored nonprofit organization dedicated to creating a just society where every person has access to opportunity and a meaningful voice in shaping their future. Rooted in Minneapolis neighborhoods, PUC advances racial justice and community well-being through an integrated network of community centers, social enterprises, arts and culture initiatives, and community mobilization and organizing.

Serving tens of thousands of residents annually, PUC operates with an approximately $11 million annual budget and a staff of 90+ across multiple sites, subsidiaries and affiliated entities.. The organization integrates direct service, earned-income enterprises, organizing, and capital development strategies — creating meaningful community impact while operating within a complex and dynamic environment.

PUC also serves as a Minnesota public charter school authorizer, overseeing a portfolio of 16–20 schools serving historically marginalized and immigrant communities. The organization holds schools accountable for academic and operational performance, adding a significant governance, compliance, and risk-management dimension to its work.

PUC's culture is grounded in equity, inclusion, and community voice. The organization believes those closest to the challenges are closest to the solutions and intentionally shares power with community members in shaping programs, advocacy, and enterprise. Its work is guided by five core values: Creativity, Justice, Resilience, Connection, and Kindness — values that shape how PUC builds solutions, advances equity, strengthens systems, partners across sectors, and leads with empathy and respect.

Organizational Context & Opportunity

Pillsbury United Communities stands at an important inflection point. With an $11 million operating budget, a diverse revenue portfolio spanning philanthropy, public funding, and earned income, and an expanding portfolio of social enterprises and capital initiatives, PUC is both mission-strong and strategically complex.

In recent years, the organization has navigated funding volatility, shifting public-sector resources, and the increasing demands of sustaining multi-site operations and mission-aligned enterprises. As PUC advances initiatives such as Justice Built Communities and strengthens its social enterprise strategy, the Board seeks a CEO who can ensure long-term financial resilience while sharpening strategic focus and operational discipline.

The next CEO will be expected to:

- Strengthen and diversify revenue to reduce vulnerability to funding fluctuations
- Align programmatic, enterprise, and capital investments with clear financial performance metrics
- Build internal systems and leadership capacity to support growth and accountability
- Clarify and execute a 3–5 year strategy that balances community voice with organizational sustainability

The Board is seeking a leader who embraces complexity, brings financial and operational rigor, and can steward both mission and margin in equal measure.
